HOLINESS.
Tune.—Bring My Heart, 242.
Song-Book, 372.
1 I bring my heart to Jesus, with its fears,
With its hopes and feelings, and its
tears;
Him it seeks, and finding, it is blest;
Him it loves, and loving, is at rest.
Walking with my Saviour,
Heart in heart, none can part.
I bring my life to Jesus, with its
Love,
And before His footstool leave it
there,
Faded are its treasures, poor and
diseased,
It is not worth living without Him,
More than life is Jesus.
Love and peace, ne'er to cease.
I bring my sins to Jesus, as I pray
That His blood will wash them all away.
While I seek for favour at His feet,
And with tears His promise still repeat:
He doth tell me plainly,
Jesus lives and forgives.
Tune.—"My Mind Upon Thee," 254.
2 My mind upon Thee, Lord, is stayed,
My all upon Thy altar laid,
"Oh, hear my prayer!
And since, to singleness of aim,
I part with all, Thy power to gain,
O God, draw near!
Chorus:
Saviour, draw Saviour, draw nearer,
etc.
By every promise Thou hast made,
And by the price Thy love has paid
For my release,
I claim the power to make me
whole,
And keep through every hour my soul
In perfect peace.
And now by faith the deed is done,
And Thou again to live hast come
Within my heart;
And rising now with Thee, my Lord, and
To love the world I can afford,
For mine Thou art.

WAR AND TESTIMONY.
Tune.—God is Keeping, 233; Song-
Book, 575.
3 God is keeping His Soldiers
fighting,
Evermore we shall conquerors be;
All the hosts of Hell are uprising,
But we're sure to have victory,
Though to heat us they've been trying.
Our Colours still are flying,
And our flag shall wave for ever,
For we never will give in.
Chorus:
No, we never will give in, etc.
We will follow our conquering Saviour,
From before Him Hell's legions shall fly.
Our battalions shall never waver,
They're determined to conquer or die.
From Holiness and Heaven
We never will be driven;
We will stand our ground for ever,
For we never will give in.
Tune.—Still for Thee, 499.
4 Once I was lost,
On the bracken's tossed,
And away from shore
My drifting bark,
All in the dark,
No beacon-light before.
Now the storm has past,
When the lifeboat came,
And the Captain roared in
New-born joy:
"I have perfect peace within."

AND OFFICIAL GAZETTE OF THE SALVATION ARMY IN CANADA AND NEWFOUNDLAND

Thirtieth Year. BRANWELL BOOTH TORONTO, FEBRUARY 8, 1913. DAVID M. BLOSS Price: Two cents.

Love of the world or love for the lost--Which is the Life worth Living?

"Refute the gains and prospects of this world in order that you may redeem the lost and ruined and gain the riches of God and the happiness of the ages."—General W. Bramwell Booth. (See page 8.)

WILLING OFFERING

Father's joy in giving and Son's Happiness in going.

Among the many striking incidents concerning Officership that I have heard from an Army platform, one stands out very clearly. It was given by a prominent Officer now in the Canadian Trenches.

The call to work in the Vineyard is often unmistakably clear and definite. It must be obeyed. May be those near and dear to us are not prepared to give us up to what they know may become a life-struggle. Then how indubitably are the scenes surrounding the hour of our separation stamped upon our memories!

The comrade concerning whom I write was willingly and with joy placed upon the altar of Officership. He came out of a small village Corps, and when the time of his departure arrived his father came from the fields (for he was a farm labourer), to say his last words of farewell. His son was leaving home for the first time, to commence his life's work, and the father, speaking with emotion, said to him: "This is the happiest day of my life. I am proud to give you up to work in the Salvation Army—an organization whose purpose is to win souls for the Master."

Our comrade was naturally greatly encouraged, and helped in the step he had taken by such words and throughout his career, the memory of them has strengthened him in the fight and helped him greatly to achieve the success he has had, and to reach the responsible position he now occupies.

Another occurrence, that has brought much joy into his life, is a Salvation Army Officer is the fact that, upon returning to the little Corps some time ago, the veteran Soldiers declared that they found the greatest possible satisfaction in the knowledge that their Corps was represented by an Officer holding an important position in the organization through which they also had found a personal Saviour—W.C.A.

"NOT STRONG ENOUGH!"

A CANDIDATE'S STORY FOR YOU.

By Colonel Kitching, International Headquarters.

Thirty years ago a young boy promised God, as he knelt at the penitential form in an Army meeting, that if he lived to be old enough and strong enough he would give his life to The Army service. Many things were against him and pointed to the likelihood of such an intention never being realized. Not the least of these was the delicate health with which he constantly had to battle. Comrade-Soldiers of his own age in the Corps where he fought, some of them themselves bound for the Training College, pitied him as they said, "No, you'll never be strong enough for the Work"; old and ailed Locals shook their heads and said, "No, you don't think of such a thing; Officers—Field and Staff—although admiring his pluck, said, 'try sorry, but I'm afraid you'll never stand it'"; his parents and sisters assured him that what he needed more than any-thirteen Cadets, of whom the delicate youth was one. He was so long that the little urinals used to suit him with, "I say, Cadet, is it cold up there?" and so thin that when he was speaking in the open air one night one of the roughs asked him if he was in training for climbing up the inside of a gaspipe; whilst his voice was so light as to cause a jocular question amongst some who stood on the fringe of the crowd at the open-air on the night of his arrival as to whether he was really a boy or a girl. The other twelve Cadets were mostly apparently healthy, brawny, and strong. But that was more than 24 years ago.

To-day the Captain of the Depot is still fighting away as an honourable and successful Field Officer of The Salvation Army.

The Cadets were soon scattered wide on the battlefield; some of thing else was the comfort of his own home; the family doctor prophesied that "twelve months of the world will finish the dear boy"; while even the then Chief of the Staff in an interview with the "dear boy" when he was a Candidate put on the finishing touch with the remark, "My one anxiety about you is your health."

At last, however, the day came when he farewelled from his Corps, and he was on his way to the Training Depot in the little market-town thirty miles from London, to which he had received his orders to proceed as a full-blown Cadet.

Arrived there—those were the days of rows and hoodings—he distinguished himself by getting one of his eyes blackened the first night and the other eye the next.

The inmates of the "Depot" numbered fourteen—the Captain in charge, who wore the mystic letters, "T.H.S." on his shoulder straps, and then did well, dying at their posts—the apparently strongest of all at his first Corps—at least one other on the Foreign Field—but with one exception, they all gone now into the next world—each, every one of them, except the long thin, and weakly boy with the girl's voice—the new Cadet who everybody said would never be able to rough it. He is longer than ever; he can no longer be said to be "thin"; he can make his voice heard as well as most of his comrades; he can work long hours seven days a week; his doctor's bill every year is a disappointment to the doctor; he is a Colonel at International Headquarters.

He tells you this story about himself to encourage you if you are holding back from applying for Officership because you think, or some of your comrades, or the Devil, tell you that you will never be strong enough to stand it, and his name is THEODORE KITCHING.

THE PRAYING LEAGUE.

BLESSINGS THAT MAKE RECH.

May He Who knoweth best What blessings thou request, Fulfill thy weak request, And grant what thou desirest.

Sunday.—A Low Door into the Kingdom. Matt. x. 1-4.

Poor in spirit—that is, to have a lowly and true estimate of oneself. The man who has a good opinion of himself.

Number One, may go all round the Kingdom of Heaven and yet never get inside. He cannot find the door. It is only when we come to an end of ourselves that we find Himself.

Monday.—The Burden That Brings Joy. Matt. v. 4.

If the clouds of grief do not always break to let the sun of happiness shine through, in temporal things, joy unfailingly follows sorrow in the spiritual life. The soul that has never felt the trouble and shame of a true repentance can never know the glory of a deep-acted experience. Those who feel the burden of their sins feel the relief of the freedom given by salvation. Do not fear to go down into the valley of humiliation, the comfort and exaltation of God will meet you at the end of it.

Tuesday.—The Value of Humility. Matt. v. 5.

The humbler the soul and more contrite the spirit, so much more does God delight to honour and uplift. His wisdom sees the worth of the humble and takes pleasure in exalting the lowly in heart. But for reason of the reward alone should we seek to shrink from poverty and love of esteem. These can be the way of following Him who was both meek and lowly in heart?

Wednesday.—Satisfaction. Matt. v. 6.

The reason that there is so little filling is because there is so little hungering. Even amongst professing sanctified people there is often much anxiety after the things of God. They fail to get because they fail to ask. They do not ask because they do not really want. Let us claim a keener appetite for spiritual things and as we expect to renew our acquaintance with the "Heavenly Father," let us expect to be filled.

DISOBEDIENCE

Backslider's Pathetic Young People.

The following letter, quite recently received by a missionary, tells its own tale. Although anonymous, we have no doubt as to its genuineness. It contains a message that candidates ought to be candidates would do well to take to heart:

"My Dear Commissioner:—I have read 'The War Cry' that you are holding Councils for the Young People. My mind goes back to the first one we had in the Old Campus with the ten Chief of the Staff. I was a Junior, and in those days I promised God I would give my life, so on that day I formed and became a Corps Cadet."

"As years went on I felt that I wanted me for Officership. I applied and was accepted. It was the promise of God I prepared to keep. I was a Corporal in the Clifton Congress Hall."

"But there was a dark cloud came over my life, and instead of praying hard, I was holding on to the promises of God. I prepared to keep and the consequence was that I almost forgot I knew it was a backslider."

"Oh the heartaches I have had! How bitter has been the experience of my disobedience to the will of God! I dare not think of it!"

"Dear Commissioner, tell me, Young People not to make a Covenant God unless they intend to go through at all cost. Things may come into their hearts which seem very hard, and the work may be dark, but warn them to hold fast to God. It is very easy to slip away."

"I feel that if I had a chance to be in the Councils I should be the first at the penitential form. Please can I ask your prayers? I am in Canada all alone, and the life here is not easy for a young woman."

"A Broken-hearted Backslider."

WANTED TO GET AT IT.

In one of his recent Councils the Commissioner narrated a brief conversation in which he had a few days previously taken part over the telephone. Although containing the element of humour, it is at the same time not wanting in helpful suggestion to young men who may be hesitating at the parting of their ways, so far as their life-work is concerned.

One night, as the Commissioner recalled, after he had retired to rest, it was indeed between 11 and 12 o'clock—the telephone bell rang, and on his acknowledging the ring he was told there was a long distance call for The Army.

Commander Eva Booth Interviewed

Impressions of her Visit—Speaks of great changes and developments in Toronto, and surveys Army's American Field

BRIEF and busy as was the Commander's stay in Toronto, and owing to heart and brain as were her appointments, she kindly found time to receive an interviewer in the interests of "The War Cry."

The Commander received us in the Commissioner's office, the Commissioner also being present part of the time. Colonel Damon was to see us, but he was not in, and then with a suggestion regarding a farewell meeting with Officers who were then assembling in the Temple, or receiving instructions for a telegram to New York. Then an esteemed friend of the Army craved the favour of an introduction, and could not, of course, be refused.

Massy Hall snapshots. Lieutenant-Colonel Damon.

For a moment or two, therefore, "The War Cry" team, which was to be kindly but firmly informed on his return by the Commissioner, that there was a way out of the office as well as a way in. But with all Canada at our back we succeeded in "holding on" long enough to get from the Commander most of what we wanted.

Suppressing Expectations. "You must have been tremendously impressed by the warmth of your welcome back to Toronto, Commander?" we suggested.

"To say that the welcome given me by my comrades, the Officers and Soldiers, and our friends, has passed my highest expectations, my wildest thought," replied the Commander, "is not to begin to express my feelings in the matter. Their loving appreciation of any little help or service God has made me to them has overwhelmed my heart."

Commissioner Rees is known to the world over as the Commander, when the Commissioner had been called away for a minute or two, "for his whole-hearted goodwill and utter forgetfulness of self when the blessing and happiness of others are concerned, and certainly on this occasion of my visit he has excelled in the exercise of these grand and noble qualities. Before the meeting had been given out in the presence of the wonderful crowd in the Massy Hall on Sunday afternoon, I saw beyond all doubt the high place he holds in the confidence and affection of the people of Toronto. But it has always been like that!"

"It was very kind of him and his dear wife to make it possible for me to renew my acquaintance with the 'Heavenly Father,' let us expect to be filled."

beautiful Blood and Fire spirit manifested by our dear people. The intense desire of the Officers and Soldiers that the meetings should result in spiritual uplift and salvation to the souls of the crowd on Sunday night, and their readiness to help in any and every way toward this end, stirred my deepest soul. It has, in-that within a few days of her return to New York she was to leave for a six-thousand-mile tour—to the Western States and back—we suggested that her improvement in health was happily being well maintained.

"I cannot claim to enjoy robust health," she answered, "yet I must not complain, for God in His goodness has marvelously sustained me, and I may add that my dear people in all parts of the American Field have borne me up before the Throne."

"In the multiplicity of demands made upon me by the war in America I have simply had to forget myself, but God's hand has been upon me. The passing years have brought me closer to the burdens

Telegram from the Commander

New York, Jan. 24.

"The War Cry," Toronto:—

I feel I must send a brief message to "The War Cry" to express my deep appreciation for the warmth of the welcome accorded me by your respected leader, Commissioner Rees, and the Toronto Officers, Soldiers, and Friends.

The crowds that thronged the great Massy Hall, the holy influence that prevailed in the meetings, and the beautiful spirit manifested throughout the memorable campaign, will ever remain one of the great spots in my Salvation Army career.

I cannot thank you as I would like to do for all the evidences of affection and confidence shown me during my brief visit to this old battle ground.

To my comrades throughout the Dominion I would say: Stand loyally to the Flag. Contend for the principles it represents. Declare unflinchingly the imperishable truths it heralds. Live with renewed consecration for the purposes for which it waves. Hold fast that which is good. Fight with the desperation that marked the lifetime of our promoted General for the salvation of those around you, and 1913 will be the record of all your fighting years.

I must not omit mention of your Memorial Scheme. It is worthy of your highest devotion, your most enthusiastic assistance, and your most generous personal support.

Toronto's Citizens' Effort is splendid. You must not on any account disappoint the Commissioner.

EVANGELINE BOOTH, Commander.

that I traversed so often until eight years ago. I have been very much moved not only by the city's marvellous development, but also by the signs of increased life and activity which I see on every hand."

"And The Army, Commander?"

"I was greatly pleased—I could not have been more so—by the decided, drawn out my heart in warmer affection for them and filled me with stronger desire for the onward march of The Army and for ever-conquering victories on the Canadian battlefield."

Having in mind the heavy campaign which the Commander was just concluding, and knowing too, and sorrows of the lost world, and you may say that with every drop of my blood, and every cell of my brain, and every fibre of my body I am in the fight to the end."

Before passing to a survey of the Salvation war on the American field, the Commander touched briefly upon the future of the Dominion.

"You rightly conjecture that I am deeply interested in the future of your country," she said. "Your boundless prairies, your almost untapped wealth beneath the soil, the tremendous growth of your leading cities, your far-flung and ever-expanding railroad systems, the optimistic spirit of your average Canadian, and the unspeakably great opportunities everywhere will prove a stronger and still stronger attraction to the peoples of the Old Countries, and bring an ever-increasing population to your shores."

What a Splendid Field!

"What opportunities all this presents to our Heaven-blessed Army! What a splendid field to sanctify our tears and prayers! It is such a great deal of hard work, but Canadian Salvationists have never hesitated in this. They did not fail to grasp the present opportunities, and God will certainly not fail them."

"What shall I say of my own beloved Territory?" queried the Commander. We had asked for some outstanding features of The Army's position in the States.

"I do not think," she continued, "I am over optimistic when I say that God has there raised up a fighting force that is second to none in the Salvation Army world. It is that there has been a great deal of time in this history."

FAREWELL TO CANADA

LIEUT.-COLONEL AND MRS. PUGMIRE SAY GOOD-BYE AT A MEETING IN THE TEMPLE CONDUCTED BY THE COMMISSIONER.

THE final public farewell to Lieut.-Colonel and Mrs. Pugmire was conducted by the Commissioner in the Temple on Tuesday, January 28th. All the City Corps united for the occasion, and the Hall was packed, to overflowing with an enthusiastic crowd of soldiers and friends anxious to hear the last words of the departing officers and bid them God-speed on their new appointment. Extended along the front of the gallery was a large streamer on which was the following inscription: "We have said you, Fare ye well. They have been helped by your smiles, and spirit." That this simple expression of the heartfelt sentiment of the audience was proved by the hearty burst of cheering which the Commissioner referred to.

Five hands occupied the platform, the first to the Headquarters and each in turn rendered a prayer previous to the arrival of the Commissioner and the farewell remarks. They also played unitedly on the organ.

The feelings of regret at the departure of the Colonel and his wife were running deep in every heart, and the meeting at times was a very solemn and touching character. The Commissioner, who was on the whole the most popular of the five, and some moments might be described as a filibuster. The Commissioner was in his jolliest mood, and evidently sought to dispel all gloom at the thought of parting by keeping to the front. The Army ideal of joy in sacrifice and privilege, and work for God instead of stern duty, are important appointments.

He paid a high tribute to the work and worth of Colonel and Mrs. Pugmire, and also to their Officer and all the officers who are leaving behind. The post for which the Colonel has been selected, he said, was one of such honor, for no one could overestimate the importance to the Army of the work of training men and women for Officership.

Representative speakers were called upon during the course of the evening. The first was Staff-Captain Hayes, who speaking on behalf of all the women Officers, referred to the high esteem in which the Colonel and his wife are held, and how they had written their names with love, mercy, and kindness on the hearts of those around them. He said, "I went away with the respect and confidence of all."

A very pleasing and unexpected little diversion was then caused by the Staff-Captain singing the famous "Corps Song" in the Temple. The first to the front and asking him to present to Lettie, Percy, and William Pugmire the prizes for good attendance at the Corps meetings. Actually, unfortunately, was unable to be present, as he was not very well. So his prize had to be sent to him.

The reading of some warm messages from the wives of the officers was a feature of the meeting. The first was from Lettie, Percy, and William Pugmire, and from the Halifax and London Divisions. Telegrams had been received from the wives of the officers, and the Commissioner read them with much interest.

and Mrs. Pugmire, and from Warden Gilmour, of the Central Prison, a letter had come, in which he regretted his unavoidable absence, but wished them God-speed and much success.

An address from Colonel Gaskin, representing Territorial Headquarters, followed. He spoke of his 30 years' association with Colonel and Mrs. Pugmire, and expressed his deep admiration of the Colonel's spirit of whole-hearted consecration to the high ideal of soul-saving. He also paid a fine tribute to Mrs. Pugmire as a devoted wife and mother. Captain Ernest Pugmire, representing the family, then gave a brief address, in which he spoke of the sadness of parting from his parents, but expressed his determination to faithfully follow the good example of whole-hearted service to Christ which they had set him. The mainly way in which he acquired himself in a difficult task was greatly appreciated.

There was some good singing between the various addresses. The Cadets sang a special farewell song, Ensign Martindale soloed, introducing a somewhat amusing monologue concerning the Colonel and one of the down-and-out brigade whom he had helped, and then, by special request, the Colonel sang his famous "Sunshine Song." Colonel and Mrs. Pugmire both gave very stirring talks. Both were in a reminiscent mood, and related incidents of their early-day fighting in England, the United States, and Canada.

The Colonel was especially grateful to God for all He had enabled him to do for the poor and the prisoners of Canada, but while rejoicing over the victories won during the time he had the oversight of the Men's Social Work, he was not forgetful of the labours of others, who had perhaps helped to lay the foundations of this work, and he paid a warm tribute to the zeal and devotion of his predecessors.

An Impressive Finish. The chief message which he sought to impress on the people present, and one which he would wish to go to every part of the Dominion through "The War Cry," was to hold on to our faith, to the promises of God, to our mission to the poor and oppressed, and to our consecration to the Salvation War.

The concluding scene of the meeting was a touching one. The Army flag was brought forward and under it the whole Pugmire family was grouped. Then the audience rose and sang, with hands outstretched as if saying good-bye, "God be with you till we meet again."

Then in a fervent prayer the Commissioner committed the Colonel and his wife and their children to the care of God, and dedicated the departing ones to their new work in London.

HAVE a habit of talking to my secret soul, and I have found myself service again and again. If men and women would only sit down and ponder over what will be the result in the hereafter they would act quite differently from what they very often do."

If people could only be made to believe that one false step will influence the destinies of many others, I do not think that that step would be so often taken; and if they really realized that one right or wrong action will make an eternal impression for good or evil, much more would they be careful to commit the wrong.

Eternity's Harbours. And just as taking a false step and doing a wrong act will surely face you in years to come, so will your decision for or against offering yourself for Officership in the Salvation Army be heard of in Eternity. You will have to face, in another world, the result of what you do or do not do in this world, here we sow, but there we reap; here we scatter the seeds, there we reap the crop; for it is eternally true that "whatsoever a man sows, that shall he also reap."

Young man, young woman, what is your harvest going to be? I might say a good deal about the afterworlds of the sinner who has never known God, but that is not my purpose just now. What I do want to say something about is the afterworld of the man or woman who has cried, "By God's grace I will. My vows shall be performed, my covenants kept, and my life shall be at the disposal of my Saviour."

Sentry, Pilot, and Shepherd. Both had the light. Both saw the need. Both knew God's will. Both believed in Hell and in Heaven. Both believed in the damnation and Salvation of souls. Both had seen Calvary. Both had watched the Son of God suffer and die. Both had heard Him say, "Follow Me," but one refused while the other obeyed. The afterworlds of the man or woman who deliberately holds back and refuses to make the consecration must be sorrowful in the extreme. What can I say of the sentry who sleeps while the enemy advances; of the pilot who refuses to take his place on the bridge and allows the ship to be driven, or to his students once, said: "If you wish to know a thing, become part of it. Live with it. Let it live in you. Then, and not till then, will you be able to speak with certainty on it." There is much the same wisdom in our late General's counsel to young Officers: "Know the people. Mix with them. Enter into their cares, perplexities, joys and sorrows. Be one of them. Assume no air, or tone of voice, and adopt no mode of dress likely to alienate their sympathies."

drift on to the rocky coast; of the physician who will not take health and healing to the plague-stricken city; of the shepherd who will not heed the bleating of the sheep, but leaves them to become the prey of the wild beasts of the forest?

Those Who Refuse. Has it ever really dawned upon you? If not, I will tell you now. It is those who refuse to take the crown that would lead them to a soul-winner's career and follow wild and ways of their own—it is such that are guilty of all I have said, and a thousand times more. They are the sentries who sleep. They are the pilots who refuse duty. They are the physicians who stay at home, and they are the shepherds who neglect their flocks.

me? That is no business of mine! But what can I say about the afterwards of the faithful? Of those who say, "By Thy grace I will," and "Here goes, I have done all I have let the angels be rough, let the hills be steep, let the hours be lonely, let the days be difficult, let the nights be dark, let friends be few, let enemies be many, let earth's Hell enlarge itself, and devil tempt—in spite of all this there shall be no reservation in my consecration. I tell you with a joy that is thinkable, unspeakable, and all glory, the afterwards of such is to be far beyond any description of mine, for "Eyes have not seen, nor ear heard, neither has entered into the heart of man, nor can be laid up for the Treasures-houses of Heaven."

What a reception! Heaven will be theirs! They too will not be alone, for of holy souls are their spiritual for clustered around them will be men and women, their loved Saviour. They will share in their joys, be partners in their pleasures, be partners in their delights, be at their side in seasons of triumph, and shall lead on to living fountains of water. They will cover their with garlands of unfading white lilies, spread the path with bouquets of beatitudes, and from the trees that grow on the banks of the river of the Life, while they give all to God.

Remembered in Heaven. In the midst of their tribulations they will remember, and all their holy festivities will be named after the man or woman who led them to Him who is the joy and a reward that will be far and far outweighed by things I have mentioned. They will be the joy and satisfaction come from knowing you and Him who loved you and gave himself for you.

walks the streets and gets into trouble and is called an outcast. But, added the speaker, significantly, "the Salvation Army is concerned; they take her in (Applause), and frequently a change is effected, and the hopeless case becomes again a useful member of the community."

"We are all of the same opinion regarding this work of The Army. I firmly believe, so do the members of the Church Committees, and every one with whom I have spoken on the subject, that The Salvation Army are entitled to, and will receive, the liberal and hearty support of the whole community in the way of material assistance to enable them to accomplish the end they have in view." (Applause.)

"The Lieutenant-Governor mentioned in passing, other money-raising campaigns with which he had felt it an honour to be associated in Canada, notably the Y.M.C.A. agent and the King Edward VII. Memorial, and before calling upon the Rev. John McNeill, of Cooke's Church, directed special attention to the magnificent work of Mr. E. R. Wood in connection with the Y. M. C. A. Campaign. "Once more," continued Sir John, "he has come to the conclusion that means that this is to be a successful Movement." (Applause.)

Sir John also named the other Chairman and Vice-Chairmen of the Committee, and said that with such august directors and the fact that the teams of collectors were ready to be let loose (laughter)—the desired result would certainly be accomplished.

"I am sure," he concluded, "that the result will be such as to gladden the heart of a man for whom I have always great respect, whom I am always glad to meet and with whom I am better pleased every time I meet him—Lieutenant Commissioner Rees." (Applause.)

Mr. McNeill, who was introduced as the minister of Cooke's Church, who had made such an impression in Toronto on account of his way that he did not know why he should be present unless it were that they wanted the Movement to be blessed by the presence of a minister.

(Laughter.) It seemed to him that with Sir John in the chair, and the gentlemen of the press there to report the address, as in the present circumstances no further speech was necessary. The city would be prepared to receive "cavalry" the next morning.

The introduction of a Scotch minister and a Presbyterian to bless a movement to get money for another body could certainly do no harm.

"We are glad to know that the new institution was to be devoted to educational purposes. There was no doubt about the Army's days were beyond question; and now they were going in wholeheartedly for training so that their Officers should not only be full of hope and courage but that their staff should be directed in the most practical and efficient way."

He did not know why all the Ministers of the Methodist, Presbyterian, and Congregationalists, and the Baptists should not spend a year taking a post-graduate course in The Army's new institution.

"If you can reach men to preach I will go myself," he added. "If we could only get hold of it, there is no teaching like it. But if you can reach men to preach, they will."

Many people's prayers, said Mr. McNeill, are like so much talking into a shut phone: they are switched off. "If that were only to dawn upon them they would ring up again."

"And if The Army has taught us anything," he continued, "they have taught us how to lift our hearts in singing; they have taught us the preaching force of singing."

"We are going to do a great thing together in Toronto by getting this new institution. May it soon be opened and in full blast! (Applause.)"

The Commissioner's first word was one of heartfelt gratitude to the Lieutenant-Governor, to Mr. Wood, to Mr. Ryrie, and the other gentlemen present who were manifesting so deep an interest in the launching of the Memorial Scheme. He wished to give a statement of facts regarding The Army's work, believing that would be of the greatest service to all the workers in the Campaign.

The Commissioner then described the beginnings of the social operations; how that they were a development of the soul-saving work, and were still an essential part of the same work. He illustrated the point by an incident from his own field experience.

Statistics and brief narrations of conversion were also given, and in

The Army was doing good business among them. This was the kind of work that has been done up and down the country, and certainly this was nation-building in the best sense of the word.

"It is because I believe in The Army and because I see the need of a Training School such as they hope to erect that I esteem it an honour to be identified with this movement." (Applause.)

Mr. James Ryrie said he had been accustomed to contribute to The Army without looking closely into its work. "But I have got into it," he added, "and I am going to stay with it." (Applause.) He went on to express his opinion that The Salvation Army is doing a unique work. "They are," he said, "looking after the Lord's poor, the devil's poor, and the poor devils." (Laughter.) He also spoke of the difficulty that red-tape and officialism sometimes present to a man who wishes to reform and to those who wish to help him to do so. The Army, he said, provides direct means of helping, and is an open door.

Speaking of the Campaign, Mr. Ryrie declared: "This thing is going. We are going to win. We have a happy task, as well as added point, to the statement by telling a very incident of western life, the interest in the work of the Army. He had been great, what he had seen of it, were not a Y. M. C. A. wish to be an Army."

Under Mr. Warburton the men of the various respective Captains to business over the likely donors upon were called the next day sixteen teams, under the of a captain, who is day of the work, and each ten men. The captains are Cox; 4, W. S. Dimick; Gundry; 4, Arnold; 5, W. Garrett; 6, Thomas; 8, H. Lane; 9, W. 12, W. S. Major; 13, 14, T. J. Lee; 15, B. 16, J. Curtis. Lieut. Colonel and Turner and Brigadier have headed additional in posed of Army Officers.

The Headquarters of the Campaign is in the premises, temporarily, 101 Yonge Street, where the members of the Here the Collectors and Soldiers meet for lunch at 12.30 each day to report progress. A large staff occupies the front of the building, the hands of whom are

The first donation received at 101 Yonge St. was a $1 bill, handed in by a man who was under the influence of drink. The second contribution consisted of five $10 gold pieces.

Conclusion the Commissioner spoke of what it was intended to do with the aid of the new and larger Training Institution. His words were received with evident pleasure.

Mr. E. R. Wood said he was present for the same reason that all of them were there—because we sympathize with the objects and work of The Salvation Army. "We have known of the work for many years," he continued, "and we believe in The Salvation Army. We believe that General Booth was a great man, that he was a nation-builder, and that he was deserving of some worthy memorial." (Applause.)

Mr. Wood laughingly suggested that when one gets old he becomes reminiscent, recalled the early days of The Army in Canada, and briefly described the stories of two notable characters whose conversation forced citizens to the conclusion that hero of which was a man of much bravado, but easily frightened into tamely surrendering. "We don't want men of that stamp," concluded Mr. Ryrie, amid applause.

Sir John Gilmour, at this stage of the proceedings, suggested that as they were getting down to business, the conduct of affairs might be handed over to Mr. Warburton, and again assuring the gathering that he would take the greatest possible interest in the Campaign, His Honour withdrew.

Mr. Warburton was breezy and optimistic as ever. "We were not in the habit of failing," he said, the reason being that they did not come into a scheme until they were assured there was a good cause behind it. The people of Toronto might be depended on to help a good cause if it were properly presented to them. Mr. Warburton spoke also of his amount of money collected since to day. It is naturally a keen interest to great numbers of people in the street.

It is worthy of record that the first contribution, handed in at Headquarters on Monday was a $1 bill given by a man who was under the influence of drink, and who said he had great respect for the memory of General Booth.

On Sunday the Commissioner and the Staff Band gave an evening service for men and women of the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. at the Strand Theatre, Yonge Street. Mr. Warburton was Master of Ceremonies, and the thousand men and women who gathered for the service were under the influence of the Male Choir, the spirited singing of the Band, and the stirring music of the Band. Our crowds are increasing. They also gave impressive evidence of their keen appreciation.

The Commissioner spoke of two phases of Army work. He held might be held in the bath sent me to head the "heart." That was what he did all the time. He also briefly described the work of the Memorial and the men, and the work of salvation.

Feb. 8, 1913.

YEAR'S IMMIGRANTS
Nearly 400,000 Arrivals in Canada.

Official statistics recently published at Ottawa show that during the twelve months from April 1 to December 31, last year, 335,083 immigrants arrived in Canada, 113,728 being from the United States, the remainder coming in by ocean ports, from Britain and all other countries.

These figures show an increase of 14 per cent, as compared with the corresponding months of 1912, which were 285,151, and 107,365 from the United States, making a total for the last months period, last year, of 292,516 persons.

Towards this increasing total The Salvation Army has, of course, contributed a very considerable number, its chief aim having been, as previously, to bring out people who are most likely to make healthy, happy, and prosperous settlers in the changed conditions of the new country. In this way it has specially encouraged the emigration of farm labourers, domestic servants, and wives and children, and husbands and fathers who had already settled in the Dominion. Its plans for the approaching season work are well in hand, and there is little doubt that the number of people with whom our Officers will deal during the present year will exceed last year's figure.

THE WAR CRY.

Commander Eva Booth

SURVEY OF THE AMERICAN SALVATION WAR

Soldiers were more devoted, more enterprising, more deeply, more compassionate of souls, or more at the present time. I am filled with gratitude to God when I review the advances of the past five years.

"The spiritual work upon the field has made good progress; a failure here and there only emphasizing the fact that our American Field, taken as a whole, has advanced to solid victory."

"Our Social advance has been just as good, a distinct feature of this having been soul-saving victories amongst the men of our Industrial Homes. It was a sight to make angels rejoice to witness Maj. Winchell, of Jersey City (to quote just one instance) bringing to the Bazaar Demonstration, held on Thanksgiving Day last, no fewer than 20 full-uniformed men from his Home."

"This is the work we are doing in our local institutions; not only temporarily assisting poor, broken humanity, but by God's grace piecing it together again and bringing these men under the power of His eternal salvation. In this particular demonstration we had considerably over 200 drunkards at the penitence, and the next day many of these were apporportioned to our Industrial Homes in Greater New York, where they will have an excellent chance to work out their temporal salvation."

The Commander turned eagerly to the subject of the large number of properties under construction in the States.

"Amongst the interesting functions of the year-end just past," she said, "was the Staff Meeting at National Headquarters, and one of the most stirring facts brought forward at that meeting was that regarding our property advance. America has increased 200 per cent, during the past seven or eight years, and propositions now on foot will, when completed, probably increase it another $1,000,000.

"The spirit of Salvationism is dominant everywhere, and both for devotion and efficient service, I back my American Soldiers against any world over."

"The promotion to Glory of my precious father," continued the Commander, "was, apart from the acute sorrow it brought to myself, a personal shock to many leading men in the United States, and never have I witnessed so great a wave of sympathy and general regret as poured into my office, by wire, by mail, and by personal message at that time. The greatest statesmen, from the President down, as well as leading clergymen, including bishops, also merchants and money-kings and social leaders, hastened to express their grief."

"You will remember, perhaps, that the President was the first national leader, outside England, to cable his sympathy to the then Chief of the Staff, our present General. You see they knew the General; they were acquainted with his great passion for the benefit of humanity; they admired The Army of which he was Father and Founder."

"In his name we are, in common with our comrades in Canada and other lands, now appealing to the country for contributions to erect Training Colleges in New York and Chicago, so that his memory may be perpetuated just in the way we feel sure he would wish to have it done. The financial response is now close to the $500,000 mark, a great feature of the result being the thousands of names included in the list—names of men and women of every walk in life, right down to the inmates of our Institutions."

"As to my own heart, it is too full even now for me to say much about my great loss, for The General was so much more than a father to me—he was spiritual guide, triumphant leader, a mighty rock of support, and yet filled with the deepest love for his own household. The Christmas just passed was the first during which I have not received a personal letter from him; I missed his dear handwriting very, very much."

"It has been said that the greatest monument my father has left behind is The Army itself, which has gone along without the slightest suspicion of defeat, or even a shadow since his death, thus proving by its argument that the work was built upon the most permanent foundation."

"My heart is still stricken and sore. I was sorrowful and distressed when the blow fell, but felt I must brave the sea, which has always been a great enemy of mine, and follow his precious remains; to his last resting place. Oh, but the Lord has wonderfully comforted me in all, and the thousands of precious messages of sympathy have been as balm to my wounded spirit."

"My American Officers and Soldiers are eagerly waiting to greet the new General, whom, though not having seen, they nevertheless love. They can scarcely wait the appointed time to arrive to demonstrate their affection and loyalty. And we can promise him one of the greatest times of his life when he visits the United States."

"Let me say, through the Canadian 'War Cry,' that I cannot describe the personal confidence in our new General—in his wisdom, his great ability, his transparent spirituality and his deep pity of suffering and life."

The Commander handed us a table of statistics bearing upon the work of her command, but we regret that space cannot be found for them in the present issue.

In a few moments the Commander was due in the "Temple." I knew she would wish to send a message to the Canadian field. Of course, she would. "But there is no time now. I will let you have something." And it came, over the wires, as our readers will find on turning to page three.

To the Commissioner Rees, Territorial Headquarters, James and Albert Streets, Toronto:

Dear Commissioner:—I have pleasure in herewith sending you a contribution towards the proposed erection of a new institution for the training of Officers for The Salvation Army.

I am, Yours sincerely,

NAME,

ADDRESS,

Colonel Bullard

Byers Reports a Successful Tour in the Hall. The Division Train Held for the Army's Special.

A visit of Colonel Bullard to the Halifax Division has been a success in prominence, and was a success in the manner in which it was conducted. For several weeks prior to his arrival, the Division had been working on the matter of the meeting, and it was a triumph for the Division. The meeting was held in the hall of the Division, and it was a success in every way. The meeting was held in the hall of the Division, and it was a success in every way. Mrs. Captain Cummings

PROMOTED TO GLORY FROM WESTERN HOSPITAL, TORONTO—HER LAST TESTIMONY: "ALL IS WELL"

It is with deep sorrow that we announce the promotion to glory of Mrs. Captain Cummings, of Toronto. A few days ago a little son came to brighten the home of our comrades. Shortly after the arrival of Mrs. Cummings's condition alarmed the doctors and other attending her. She was taken from the Army's Hospital to the Western Hospital, where it was found that to save a life a critical operation was necessary. This was performed, but without avail, and in the face of expert medical attendance, Mrs. Cummings grew worse, until at 2:45 p.m. on Thursday, January 11, 1918, she passed away.

Her husband, Captain Cummings, was in the Training College at the time of her death. She was a devoted wife and mother, and her death is a great loss to her family. Envoys Hancock and Treasurer Scott from London I. conducted a recent week-end meeting. Four souls gave themselves fully to God. In the afternoon the Envoys gave an address on the first two years of the Salvation Army's work. At night one soul came to the meeting, and nine souls were saved.

Our International News Letter

"ALL THE WORLD" Enlarged to Sixty-four Pages, With New and Attractive Features.

Congratulations to "All the World," the Army's leading missionary magazine, which, by the way, is not as well known in Canada as it deserves to be—on its enlargement with the January issue from fifty-six to sixty-four pages. The enlargement has made possible the introduction of several new and attractive features, among which we notice, "Events of the Month," impressions and sketches, stories from many sources, "The Corps and the Town," and phases of Army work.

The January issue also contains a feature message (in script) from General Bramwell Booth, and an interesting article by Commissioner Ellison on "The Army Press." The Editor of "All the World" is Brigadier Wm. Nicholson, better known for his fine stories and sketches under the pen name of Nicholas Willis.

A party of Officers is now being gathered together from all parts of India for the purpose of touring Europe and Canada.

The Social Work of the Salvation Army presents a wide and useful field of labour for consecrated men and women. Here, it is, where, great faith and boundless sympathy, allied to sound judgment, are essential to success. The Social Officer must inspire hope in the despairing, arouse ambition in those who have become discouraged through repeated failure, and, above all, lead the wretched, lost, and wandering home to God. The mere doing of bread to the hungry, the giving of lodgings to the homeless, or the finding of work for the unemployed, or indeed any other form of material benefit, was never the end of the Social Scheme; rather are these things the means to an end, which is the conversion of these people and their permanent restoration to a life of godliness, sobriety, and usefulness.

The opportunities before The Army in this country for reaching and helping the outcast and friendless were never so great. The call for Officers reaches us from all parts of the Territory, and the advance of our work is checked only by the lack of suitable men and women. What a chance is here for those who love God and souls!

We can, within the scope of this article, but briefly outline some of the branches of social work in which the Army can employ the concerted energies of young men and women. First, we may mention the need of competent Nurses in our Hospitals and Rescue Homes. A new institution for the training of young women for this great field of useful service has just been opened in Toronto.

Some idea of the extent of the Social Work for women in Canada may be gained when we say that there are eleven Rescue Homes, two Hospitals, three Children's Homes, an Industrial Home, a Women's Metropole, and an Inebriates' Home. The good accomplished in these Homes commends itself so generally to the public eye that Government and Civic authorities readily assist in providing for their upkeep. But money alone does not meet the need. Young women, whose hearts God has touched and who will gladly spend and be spent for the sake of helping the unfortunate, are urgently required. On the men's side there is equal need. With nine Metropoles and eleven Salvage Departments in operation, there is a great chance for young men possessing the Army spirit to do good practical work in the saving of human beings.

These Metropoles provide accommodation for 624 men nightly; and many instances are on record of men who, coming to these Shelters in distress, receiving help and encouragement, have risen to good positions in life once more. Then there are the wonderful opportunities our Officers have in Canadian prisons where they are allowed to hold meetings, visit prisoners, pray with them, meet them in the discharge, and in other ways attend to their temporal and spiritual well-being. Working in conjunction with the Salvation department, our Officers when successful in rescuing men from their evil ways and permanently restoring them to society. Sometimes it is years before they see much result of their work, as the following incident will show.

Ten years ago Major Fraser met a lad in the Kingston Penitentiary who had been sentenced to be hanged, but whose sentence had been commuted to life imprisonment. He regularly visited him, but apparently did not make a very deep impression on him. Then came the time, only a few months ago, when the young fellow was released on parole. The first thing he did was to go to the Salvation Army. The only friends he had, and ask them to find him work. He was given employment in a Salvage Home. In a meeting, he sought Salvation. Another man who was converted in a meeting held at the Central Prison was shortly afterwards released on parole. The Army secured him a situation, and advanced him money to buy tools with. He is now a good Salvation Soldier, and has paid back to the Army the money that was advanced him. These are but typical instances of the one thousand and eight prisoners who, professing conversion during the past year.

Some idea of the extent of the prison work of our Officers will be gained from the following figures: Prisoners interviewed . . . 30,000 Prayed with . . . 24,000 Given employment . . . 1,000 Released on discharge . . . 5,000 Meetings held in prisons . . . 100 There are, not, then, a few men in the Army's Social Work who are doing good work.

The General with City Colonists

In Bermoundsey Town Hall, London, The General recently conducted a remarkable series of gatherings with the men of the City Colony. There were 1,200 present, all of whom were but lately in the slough of misery and despair, and many on the very brink of physical and moral ruin. Included in the company were doctors, architects, lawyers, chemists, accountants, commercial travellers, military officers, and men who can speak several languages. Low types there undoubtedly were; and between the two extremes The General had no easy task to select and apply his message. But by a skillful and frequent variation of method he succeeded in getting right home to every heart at some time during the series of soul-stirring meetings.

That the message was divinely directed was evident as soon as the Prayer Meeting started. From all parts of the building men continued to rise from their seats and walk out to the front, where they found devoted Social Officers ready to pray with and advise them. Numbers of these seekers were men upon whom the Officers had had hopeful and prayerful eyes for some time, and their eventual surrender was an occasion of unforgotten joy to them, as it undoubtedly was to The General, who had toiled so hard all day to reach their hearts and sway their wills. One hundred and ten seekers were registered, and when the composition of the gathering is borne in mind, the visible results are all the more remarkable and all the more glorious.

The General, accompanied by Mrs. Booth, also conducted a powerful Salvation Campaign in the Empire Theatre at Newcastle-on-Tyne, during which there were 84 seekers. The General and Mrs. Booth were accorded a civic reception, at which the Lord Mayor presided.

Latest advances in Finland include the purchase of a site for a Hall at Hangoe and the leasing, for a long term, of a building at Abo to accommodate 500 people.

During the last two years 4,000 striking advances have been made in the Finnish Territory (Finland), which is under the command of Col. Isaac Singh (Juce). Fifty new Corps have been opened, and regular work inaugurated in a hundred villages while the Soldiership shows an increase of nearly fifty per cent.

The Government census taken ten months ago showed about 13,000 Salvationists and adherents of The Army, and we have now a census which shows that the territory of approximately 55,000. The Local Officers list has risen from 570 to 680.

In concluding his report the General says that the great need is for more Officers, and that there are many other ways attend to their temporal and spiritual well-being. Working in conjunction with the Salvation department, our Officers when successful in rescuing men from their evil ways and permanently restoring them to society. Sometimes it is years before they see much result of their work, as the following incident will show.

ARMY SONGS

CONSECRATION.

Tunes—Rocked in the cradle, 14; Song-Book, 717.
1 Accept my youth, my strength,
My prime,
Accept each moment of my time;
Earth's choicest joys I sacrifice,
And choose Thy smile at any price.

Chorus:

1 Lord, and now obey Thy call,
And leap by faith doubt's highest wall;
—not give Thee less than all,
1 Lord, take it all, Lord, take it all!
Whatever is wrong I here confess,
Whatever is good do Thou possess;
We never seemeth to be mine,
Oh, make it Thine, Lord, make it Thine!

2 We will, my mind, my heart inspire
Thou all Thy Spirit's holy fire;
We lay the dress, the self, the shrine,
1 Joy's pure, sin-consuming flame.

Tunes—Tucker, 125; Song-Book,
38.
2 Thou Christ of burning, cleansing flame,
Send the fire!
The blood-bought gift to-day we bring,
Send the fire!
Lock, own and see this waiting people,
Thou the promised Holy Ghost,
We wait for another Pentecost,
Send the fire!

3 O Lord, hear our cry,
Thou make us fit to live or die,
Thou give us every trace of sin,
Thou bring the light and glory in,
The revolution now begin.

To make us all hearts true and brave,
To live a dying world to save,
Oh, see us out Thy altar lay
Our lives, our all, this very day—
To crown the offering now we pray.

SAVED TO SERVE.

Tunes—Glory, Jesus saves me, 43;
Always cheerful, 121; Song-Book,
No. 48.
2 Precious Saviour, Thou dost save
me,
Thine and only Thine, I am;
Oh, the cleansing Blood has reached
me,
Glory, glory to the Lamb!

Consecrated to Thy service,
I will live and die for Thee;
I will witness to Thy glory,
Of salvation full and free.

Yes, I will stand up for Jesus;
He has sweetly saved my soul,
Cleansed my soul from sin's corruption,
Sanctified and made me whole.

Tunes—Missionary, B. J., 278;
Song-Book, No. 86.
4 From Greenland's top mountains,
From India's coral strand,
Where Africa's sunny fountains
Roll down their golden sand,
From many an ancient river,
From many a palmy plain,
They call us to deliver
Their land from error's chain.

Can we, whose souls are lighted
With wisdom from on high,
Can we to men benighted
The Lamp of Life deny?
Salvation! O salvation!
The joyful sound proclaim,
Till each remotest nation
Has heard our Saviour's name.

SALVATION.

Tunes—Take Salvation, 1707; Saviour, like a Shepherd, 169.

5 Hark! the voice of Jesus calling:
"Come, ye guilty, come to Me;
I have rest and peace to offer,
Rest, thou labouring one, for thee.
Take salvation—
Take it now and happy be."

Soon that voice will cease its calling;
Now it speaks, and speaks to thee.
Shinner, heed the gracious message:
"To the Blood for refuge flee;
Take salvation—
Take it now and happy be."

Life is found alone in Jesus,
Only there 'tis offered thee—
Offered without price or money,
'Tis the gift of God sent free;
Take salvation—
Take it now and happy be.

IT IS COMING!

every meeting by his presence.
Concerning the "War Cry" riot" says: "The 'War Cry' is the most thrilling, interesting, and fascinating ever published in the Province of Prince Edward Island. Colonel Bullard is a quiet, witty, and forceful man, and he held the enthralled gaze of the crowded house from 8 o'clock until almost midnight."
On Tuesday we had a very interesting meeting by the Rev. Dr. Cummings was present and quoted the services of the Rev. Mr. McNairn was the speaker in the highest manner of the lecture. He deplored the fact that there were not more men in the world who could stir up the interest of foreign nations. At Stellarton we were met by Captain Rowe and Mr. L. W. Cunningham. Mrs. Springle had been very ready and on the 10th the Colonel gave his lecture at New Glasgow, where he was assembled on Friday. The Colonel's lecture, the Col- made a powerful impression on the hearts of those who heard the right before.

At this Corps the Colonel, Westville, and the United for an Officers' meeting on Friday. The Colonel's lecture, the Col- made a powerful impression on the hearts of those who heard the right before.

Since Captain Morrison charge some wonderful meetings have been held at W. The Hall has been closed, and the well-known ed with Scripture texts. The day two souls found pardon.
